Daniel Raso leads the Commercial and Construction Disputes team. He focuses on project management and early intervention to help his clients better deliver their objectives on time, on budget and without disputes. Daniel believes that most disputes can be avoided by focusing on this “middle-ground” of project management and delivery. Where disputes do arise, Daniel tailors solutions that address his clients’ specific commercial drivers.

Daniel joined Moores after eight years at one of Australia’s leading construction practices, the last 18 months of which were a secondment at the Victorian Department of Education and Training. He is known for his ability to keep his eye on the big picture when advising on highly technical disputes and for his understanding of the commercial needs of clients.

He has extensive experience in a wide range of general commercial, construction and development disputes across the education, Government, not-for-profit, transport, IT, development and telecommunications sectors. This experience includes project management advice for distressed projects, advising clients on range of contract claims such as variations, delay, latent conditions and defects, litigation (Court and Tribunal), expert determination, arbitration, mediation and Security of Payment Act claims.
